

Daisuke Ueda

Deputy Director General (and Group Director of Higher Education and Social Security) , Human Development Department, Japan International Cooperation Agency (JICA)

He is currently in charge of directing and supervising strategy formulation and operation management of JICA's cooperation in higher education and social security sector.

Through his 25 years' experience in JICA, he has accumulated extensive experience in higher education sector through his assignment at Human Development Department of JICA for more than 9 years. He has formulated and managed variety of higher education projects such as establishment of new universities; capacity building of partner universities; formulation and strengthening of regional university network including Japan; and scholarship program.

In addition to his experience in higher education sector, he has engaged in financial management of JICA, and regional operation in Southeast Asian Countries.

He holds Master of Public Administration from Harvard University as well as Master of International Studies from Kobe University.