

Roberta Malee Bassett is Global Lead for Tertiary Education and Senior Education Specialist at the World Bank, where she provides coordinated support to the World Bank's $7.9b global lending and analytical efforts supporting post-secondary education reforms. She leads operational teams implementing projects across a variety of tertiary and higher education projects, addressing issues such as finance and quality assurance reform, internationalization, equity and access, research and competitiveness, and skills development. Prior to joining the World Bank, Dr. Bassett held several university positions in administration, teaching, and research at institutions in the US and UK. She is the author/editor of numerous publications on topics related to international higher education including co-authoring the 2021 World Bank policy advisory framework on tertiary education: "STEERing Tertiary Education: Toward Resilient Systems that Deliver for All." She holds a Ph.D. from the Center for International Higher Education at Boston College; M.A. in higher education administration from Stanford University; and B.A. in political science from Columbia University.